Iran’s Foreign Ministry Organization during the Nasseri Period

Sabah Khosravizadeh*, Hadi Ghysarian Fard

The subject of the present research is the organization of the Iranian foreign ministry during the Nasseri period. Traditionally, Iranian foreign policy was the privilege of the shah, and at the time it was nominally the supervision and the court secretariat at other times it was supervised by the secretary and the province. (monshi al - mamalek). The aim of this research is to identify the process of organization and the creation of the components of this ministry during Nasser al-Din Shahs Period. In this study the descriptive research method is descriptive and based on documents, manuscripts and library sources. The conclusion it is a shown that the organization of the foreign ministry which was limited to the foreign minister, some secretaries, interpreters and scriveners during Fath ali shah and Mohammad shah’s reign changed by the institutionalization of the foreign ministry during the reign of Naser al-Din Shah by the organization of several components and department and regular office entrusted to the management of the foreign minister.

Keywords: Qajarid, Diplomatic Organization, Foreign Ministry, Nasser al-Din Shah.

* PhD Student of Islamic Iran History at Imam Khomeini International University (sabah.khosravi@gmail.com)
 M.A in History of Islamic Revolution (hadighysarian@gmail.com)
Received in 21 Jun 2013, Accepted in 26 Nov 2013